1. In the matter of Intent to Use Application SN 78-506,988, for the mark STEALTHRAY, in International Class 09 for steerable satellite antenna for providing data communication services to automobiles, recreational vehicles, trains, buses, trucks, boats and aircraft; steerable satellite antenna for providing satellite television services to automobiles, recreational vehicles, trains, buses, trucks, boats and aircraft; steerable satellite antenna for providing satellite television and data communication services to automobiles, recreational vehicles, trains, buses, trucks, boats and aircraft, the Opposer states as follows:

2. The Opposer, or its predecessor in title, has priority of use of the mark STEALTH, in Common Law, on a broad range of goods and services which are listed in the Federal Registrations and Applications, and on similar goods, related goods, and competitive goods; namely high frequency mobile antennas; antennas; satellite dishes sold to the identical customers, through similar channels of trade that Applicant's goods are sold in, and/or are to be sold. The Opposer, or its predecessor in title, has priority of use of the mark

STEALTH on similar goods as early as 1986. .pn 2

See the goods and services listed in Opposer's attached list of STEALTH Federal Trademark Registrations and Applications.

3. The Opposer has priority of use of the mark STEALTH in numerous classes of goods and services. The Opposer holds rights to a family of STEALTH marks, promoted together in concert, as are well known to the Applicant, which goods and services are sold in the same channels of trade and to similar customers as Applicant's since at least as early as 1986 and hereby opposes registration of the confusingly similar mark STEALTHRAY, Application Serial No. 78-506,988.

4. There is no issue as to priority. The Applicant's intent to Use date is subsequent to the issuance date of Opposer's said Registrations and its listed intent to Use date(s).

5. Opposer has sold its goods and services listed in the aforesaid registrations under the aforesaid STEALTH marks, as herein before referred to, throughout the United States. Opposer has developed an exceedingly valuable goodwill in respect to the STEALTH marks covered by the aforesaid registrations.

6. By virtue of its efforts, and the expenditure of considerable sums for promotional activities and by virtue of the excellence of its products, the Opposer has gained for its listed marks a most valuable and famous reputation.

7. The Opposer licenses the STEALTH mark for a wide variety of collateral merchandise and expends substantial sums of money on policing<sup>1</sup> the use of Opposer popular and famous trademark on a broad range of goods and services.

8. The Opposer holds rights <sup>2</sup> directly in the following well-known STEALTH

1. See attached list of over 60 victories wherein the Opposer has successfully opposed and/or canceled over 60 STEALTH and/or STEALTH formative marks at the PTO.

2. §16.13 McCARTHY ON TRADEMARKS, II. Ownership. Who Is Owner Of Trademark, [I] Introduction, Trademarks have often been held to be a kind of "property." In discussing "ownership of a trademark, we must recognize that we are dealing with intangible, intellectual property. "Ownership" means that one possesses a right which will be recognized and upheld in the courts: To say one has a "trademark" implies ownership and ownership implies the right to exclude others. If the law will not protect one's claim of right to exclude others from using an alleged trademark, then he does not own a "trademark", for that which all are free to use cannot be a trademark. Deister Concentrator Co., 48 CCPA 952, 289 F.2d 496, 129 USPQ 314 (1961). Trademark ownership inures to the legal entity who is in fact using the mark as a symbol of origin. The Federal Trademark Register can be rectified in order to correct the ownership of a registered mark or a pending application. Chapman v. Mill Valley Cotton, 17 USPQ2d 1414 (TTAB 1990) (Opposer Alpha alleged that she, not applicant, owned the mark. Applicant was a joint venture composed of parties Alpha and Beta. After some litigation in state court, the parties filed an assignment from party Beta to party Alpha amounting to a concession that Alpha was indeed the owner of the mark. The Board viewed the TLRA 1989 amended version of §18, which permits rectifying the "register" as broad enough to include changing the name of the owner of an application, as well as of an issued registration.

1. Opposer has invested a fortune and over 20 years building the STEALTH Brand into one of the premiere Brands in the country.

9. Since 1986 the Opposer has forcefully extended its well-known trademark into the Applicant's market and today is a model for others in the trademark marketing and licensing industry in handling successfully brand extension as well known to the Applicant.

10. The trademark proposed for registration by the Applicant, namely STEALTHRAY, is applied to similar goods as those sold by Opposer and so nearly resemble the Opposer's mark as to be likely to confuse therewith and mistake therefore.

11. The Applicant's mark STEALTHRAY is deceptively similar to Opposer's STEALTH mark so as to cause confusion and lead to deception as to the origin of Applicant's goods bearing the Applicant's mark.

12. If the Applicant is permitted to use and register STEALTHRAY for its goods, as specified in the application herein opposed, confusion in trade resulting in damage and injury to the Opposer would be caused and would result by reason of the similarity between the Applicant's mark and the Opposer's mark. Persons familiar with Opposer's mark STEALTH would be likely to buy Applicant's goods as and for a service sold by the Opposer. Any such confusion in trade inevitably would result in loss of sales to the Opposer.

1. Notices hereby served on the Applicant, that the Opposer is entitled to rely on each one of its applications listed herein when they mature into Federal Trademarks in support of this Opposition. Opposer is serving notice on the Applicant that each and every time one or more of Opposer's pending STEALTH applications matures into a Federal Trademark registration, the Opposer will seek to amend its pleadings in order to rely on all of Opposer's STEALTH Federal Trademark registrations in support of this Opposition.

Furthermore, any defect, objection or fault found with Applicant's goods marketed under its STEALTHRAY mark would necessarily reflect upon and seriously injure the reputation which the Opposer has established for its products merchandised under its STEALTH marks for over 20 years.

13. If the Applicant were granted the registration herein opposed, it would thereby obtain at least a prima facie exclusive right to the use of its mark. Such registration would be a source of damage and injury to the Opposer.

14. Opposer asserts that there is a likelihood of confusion between the Applicant's mark STEALTHRAY and the Opposer's registered family of STEALTH and STEALTH formative marks under Trademark Act Section 2(d), 15 U.S.C. Section 1052(d).

15. Opposer asserts that its mark STEALTH is well known and/or famous and that the Applicant seeking registration of the confusingly similar mark STEALTHRAY, which when used would cause dilution under section 43(c).<sup>1</sup>

16. If Applicant's mark, STEALTHRAY, is allowed to register it will lessen the capacity of Opposer's famous mark STEALTH to identify and distinguish its goods or services and to license its well known STEALTH BRAND NAME.

17. The Opposer uses its famous STEALTH mark as a trade name, corporate name, service mark and trademark since at least as early as 1981 and is engaged in an aggressive STEALTH licensing and marketing program, as well known to the Applicant.

18. The Opposer, located in Chicago, Illinois, believes that it will be damaged by registration of the mark STEALTHRAY shown in Application SN 78-506,988 and hereby opposes same. The Opposer uses its STEALTH mark as a trade name, corporate name, service mark and trademark and engages in an aggressive licensing program for over 20 years, as well known to the Applicant.

19. The Opposer has used the trademark STEALTH as a trade name, service mark and house mark in interstate commerce, since at least as early as 1981, long prior to Applicant's submission of its Application for Federal Registration of the mark STEALTHRAY.

1. On January 14, 1997, District Court Judge Charles P. Kocoras, from the Northern District of Illinois, issued a decision in a STEALTH trademark infringement case brought by the Opposer's predecessor in title, Judge Kocoras ruled that "the mark STEALTH has also created a distinctive designation of the origin of products on which it has place and is widely recognized by the public". See Case No. 96 C 2037, decision dated January 14, 1997.

20. The Opposer is the exclusive worldwide Licensor of the mark STEALTH as listed in the 1999 Licensing Resource Directory, as well known to the Applicant.

21. The Opposer has priority of use, as early as 1986, on the same and/or similar goods, as previously stated and on the goods and services listed in Federal trademark registrations and applications.

22. The use of the Applicant's mark STEALTHRAY sought to be registered in the aforesaid application is likely to blur the distinctiveness of the Opposer's famous STEALTH trademark(s).

23. The use of the Applicant's mark STEALTHRAY sought to be registered in the aforesaid application is likely to cause confusion, mistake or deception in the buying public or cause the public to believe that there is a connection between the parties, or a sponsorship of Applicant's goods by Opposer.

24. The Opposer licensed its STEALTH mark on a wide variety of collateral merchandise.

25. The Opposer expends substantial sums of money on policing the use of its famous STEALTH trademark. See a true and correct copy of the attached list of victories.

26. The Opposer has forcefully extended its famous trademark and today is a model for others in handling successfully such a brand extension.

27. The Applicant's mark STEALTHRAY is confusingly similar to Opposer's mark STEALTH mark(s).

28. Since at least as early as 1981, the Opposer has been, and is now, using the mark STEALTH in connection with the sale of goods and services in numerous classes. Said use has been valid and continuous since said date of intent to use and has not been abandoned.

29. If the Applicant is permitted to register the mark, and thereby, the prima facie exclusive right to use in commerce the mark STEALTHRAY on the goods licensed and sold by the Opposer, confusion is likely to result from any concurrent use of Opposer's mark STEALTH and that of the Applicant's alleged mark STEALTHRAY, all to the great detriment of Opposer, who has expended its lifetime and considerable sums and effort in promoting its well known mark.

30. Purchasers are likely to consider the goods of the Applicant sold under the mark STEALTHRAY as emanating from the Opposer, and purchase such goods as those of the Opposer, resulting in loss of sales to Opposer.

31. Applicant's mark STEALTHRAY, when used on or in connection with the goods of the Applicant, is merely descriptive or deceptively misdescriptive of the goods.

32. Opposer's famous family of STEALTH marks are marketed in concert.

33. Upon information and belief, said intent to use application was obtained fraudulently in that the formal application papers filed by Applicant, under notice of §1001 of Title 18 of the United States Code stated that Applicant had a valid intent to use date. Said statement was false. Said false statement was made with the knowledge and belief that it was false, with the intent to induce authorized agents of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to grant said registration in that the Applicant, at the time it filed its said application and declaration were in fact an invalid intent to use date.

34. Applicant's mark STEALTHRAY is identical to Opposer's mark STEALTH with the addition of the suffix "RAY".

35. Upon information and belief, said application was obtained fraudulently in that the formal application papers filed by Applicant, under notice of §1001 of Title 18 of the United States Code stated that Applicant had a valid intent to use in commerce when Applicant filed its Trademark application on October 27, 2004. Applicant had no valid intent to use in commerce on the date asserted in the said Application.

36. Upon information and belief, the Applicant has no evidence to establish a valid "intent to use" date in commerce.

37. Applicant's intent to use application was a fraud in that Applicant had no use on some or all of the said goods listed therein bearing the mark STEALTHRAY on the intent to use date and on the intent to use in commerce date as well known to the Applicant.

38. Applicant's said intent to use statement was a false statement and was made with the knowledge and belief that it was false, with the intent to induce authorized agents of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to grant said registration as well known to the Applicant.

39. Upon information and belief, said statement of intent to use of the mark STEALTHRAY on the goods in question, was made by an authorized agent of Applicant with the knowledge and belief that said statements was false. Said false statements were made with the intent to induce authorized agents of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to grant said registration.

40. Applicant's mark STEALTHRAY was not applied for according to its correct type<sup>1</sup>, as shown in its said application.

41. Upon information and belief, the Applicant was not the owner of the mark for which the registration is requested<sup>2</sup>.

42. Upon information and belief, applicant's intent to use application was signed with the knowledge that another party had a right to use the mark in commerce on the same or similar goods.

43. Concurrent use of the mark STEALTHRAY by the Applicant and STEALTH by the Opposer may result in irreparable damage to Opposer's Marketing and/or Trademark Licensing Program, reputation and goodwill.

44. If the Applicant is permitted to obtain a registration of the mark STEALTHRAY, a cloud will be placed on Opposer's title in and to its trademark, STEALTH, and on its right to enjoy the free and exclusive use thereof in connection with the sale of its goods and/or services, and on its Trademark Licensing Program, all to the great injury of the Opposer.

45. Upon information and belief, Applicant's Intent to Use Application was signed with the knowledge that another party had a right to use the mark in commerce.

46. Upon information and belief, the Applicant has abandoned the mark STEALTHRAY.

47. The registration to Applicant of the mark STEALTHRAY shown in the aforesaid application is likely to and will result in financial and other injury and damage to the Opposer in its business and in its enjoyment of its established rights in and to its said mark STEALTH.

48. As is well known to Applicant, the Opposer has been very successful and has previously prevailed against numerous other Applicants and/or Registrants for the unauthorized use of their similar STEALTH marks (see attached true and correct copy).

49. The Opposer has experienced considerable media attention, i.e., July 4, 2005 in the New York Times; July 28, 2005 in the Chicago Sun-Times; for the assertive enforcement of

'Stealth' fighter: Chicago man says movie name belongs to him

Battling Columbia Pictures over title, possible merchandise

BY EMILY NGO
Staff Reporter

On billboards and in movie trailers everywhere, big, bold letters spell out "Stealth," a Columbia Pictures film opening Friday about Navy pilots.

But those same big, bold letters also appear on Leo Stoller's list of federally registered trademarks, and he has hit the courts to make the case that "stealth" belongs to him.

"If a trademark owner doesn't police his trademark, it gets diluted and watered down," said Stoller, a 59-year-old owner of Rentamark.com, a Chicago company that licenses trademarks to others.

The legal battle over whether Columbia Pictures may use "Stealth" as the movie title and as the brand behind any marketed merchandise began with a cease-and-desist letter from Stoller in March, seeking to settle out of court.

Columbia Pictures then asked the federal court here to rule that Stoller did not have a trademark-infringement case. Stoller has responded with a counterclaim.

Even Stoller says he doesn't exclusively own "stealth" as a word.

Leo Stoller has trademarked names such as "TERMINATOR," which he says he didn't police aggressively enough. —BOB BLACK/SUN-TIMES

He owns it only in relation to products he has registered under that name, said Clinton Francis, professor of intellectual property law at Northwestern University. Among these products: toy airplanes. Not among them: movies.

"He has a reduced prospect of bringing infringement action" if Columbia Pictures markets only the movie, Francis said. "But if they try to create derivative toys in the name

EBERT: "Stealth" a cross between "Top Gun" and "2001." Page 45

'Stealth' . . . that's classic infringement, there's going to create consumer confusion, and [Columbia Pictures] would have to obtain a license from [Stoller] to use 'stealth.'"

'All our rights evaporated'

Stoller has licensed the name "STEALTH" for dozens of products and services. They include sporting goods, lawn sprinklers and "hunters' scent" spray. And orthodontic appliances.

Columbia Pictures refused comment because the matter is still in litigation.

Stoller said he wants to prevent the stealth matter from turning out the way "TERMINATOR" — another trademark of his — did in the 1980s.

"We didn't aggressively police our mark, and all the companies thought Carolco Pictures [the producer of the 'Terminator' films] was the primary user," Stoller said. "All our rights evaporated . . . there was a 'sucking sound from our company to theirs.'"

In years past, Stoller said, Rentamark has come to agreements with Northrop Grumman, contractor of the military's Stealth bomber, and with Nissan, manufacturer of the Sentra, another Stoller trademark.

Fur flies in Uptown over dog-leash permits

BY LISA DONOVAN
Staff Reporter

They growled about the cost, logic and bureaucracy of the $35 fee for letting their pooches play in Chicago's dog-friendly spaces.

Those were the sentiments of some of the more than 100 dog owners and enthusiasts gathered Wednesday night in Uptown's Margate Park Fieldhouse to discuss a new permit required for dogs to play off-leash in Chicago Park District dog parks.

While most didn't mind the idea behind the measure — aimed at making sure dogs have adequate lowed to mingle in such parks — some balked at the fee, which they described as steep.

The $35 permit required for the first dog in a home and $15 for each additional pup covers administration fees and maintenance for the park district's 10 lots and beaches where dogs can run off-leash.

'Not in the money business'

Eric Miller, a lawyer and Uptown resident, said he wanted to know who came up with this Cook County mandate that the Park District must now enforce.

"Nobody seems to be taking re-several park district and county representatives, who explained the process and took questions.

Among them was Dan Farmer, an administrator with the Cook County Animal Control Unit. When Miller wasn't satisfied with the answer he got, he said, "It's been presented to us as a . . . requirement, but it looks like a grab for money."

An exasperated Farmer fired back, "I'm not in the money business; I'm not asking to be."

Farmer explained that other cities in the county already require such permits. In Chicago the Park District is making permit applica-

THE NEW YORK TIMES

Leo Stoller, below, known as the "Trademark Terrorist," is in a legal dispute with Sony's Columbia Pictures unit over the 2005 film Stealth.

U.S. entrepreneur makes his living off confusion over rights Tricks of the trademark

BY KEVIN RESTIVO

Research In Motion Ltd.'s ongoing patent infringement battle over wireless e-mail technology is just one of many court cases involving intellectual property sprouting up in the United States and elsewhere.

Companies looking to register their well-known brands in another country regularly find themselves being sued by trademark holders hoping to reach large out-of-court settlements.

"There are tens of thousands of names [worldwide] that conflict now," said Mark Hayes, an intellectual property lawyer with Blake Cassels and Graydon LLP in Toronto. "The national scope of trademark and the internationalization of business are coming into greater conflict."

Mr. Hayes said trademarks given to restaurants, for example, are often regional in scope, which creates the potential for conflict if a business tries to use the same name in another jurisdiction.

The ensuing confusion has allowed entrepreneurs such as Chicago-area businessman Leo Stoller to thrive.

Dubbed the "Trademark Terrorist" by opponents, Mr. Stoller has registered dozens of trademarks in the United States. He earns a living by wringing money out of companies he says are wrongly using words such as "stealth," "chutzpah" and "trump," to which he says his companies own the trademark rights.

Mr. Stoller's registered companies with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office are called Rentamark.com, Central Manufacturing, Stealth Industries and S. Industries.

Much like a patent "troll" — the derisive term assigned to patent holding companies such as RIM's nemesis NTP Inc. — Mr. Stoller's companies do not sell products.

Instead, he negotiates with and often sues companies using or trying to register trademarks similar to his own in the United States. Over the past several years, Mr. Stoller has sent dozens of cease-and-desist letters to companies warning them of infringement. He has sued more than 60 companies, even though he says the courts are a "last resort" for him.

THE MAN AND HIS TRADEMARKS

Legal experts say Mr. Stoller has no particular rights to any one word. Lance Johnson, a trademark lawyer with Roylance, Abrams, Berdo and Goodman in Washington, D.C., says Mr. Stoller is persuasive, which more often than not leads to settlements.

"When he bluffs, he does so with absolute conviction," said Mr. Johnson, who has fought Mr. Stoller successfully on behalf of clients in court. "He lies convincingly. He presents his position with a passionate conviction that many folks perceive as a substantive knowledge and correctness."

As a result, most companies choose to settle with Mr. Stoller. An Oregon women's softball club, for instance, gave him US$100 for using the word "stealth" in a pamphlet. Northrop Grumman continued to use "Stealth" for its legendary bomber, but also paid Mr. Stoller the symbolic sum of US$10 as part of a settlement that included Northrop abandoning trademark applications for spinoff products such as model airplanes and video games.

Mr. Stoller usually manages to wring more money out of companies. Mr. Johnson says Mr. Stoller makes at least US$125,000 a year. In an interview, Mr. Stoller would not say how much he makes a year, citing his company's private status.

Some companies with deep pockets sometimes put up a fight. Mr. Stoller is involved in a legal dispute with Sony's Columbia Pictures unit over the film Stealth, released last year, which features elite Navy pilots.

John Pocekovic, a Vancouver-based vodka distributor, is also fighting Mr. Stoller at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. Mr. Pocekovic tried to register the name Stealth vodka with the PTO last year with hopes one day he could sell the product in the United States.

Mr. Stoller discovered Mr. Pocekovic's application through a search and sent a letter instructing Mr. Pocekovic to stop using the word "stealth" in his vodka brand, which is distributed in British Columbia.

"My initial reaction was, 'Is this guy for real?'" Mr. Pocekovic said. "The claims are so ridiculous, it's hard to make heads or tails of them."

In his defence, Mr. Stoller says he has owned the trademark rights to the word stealth since 1985 and is entitled to any rewards.

"We are in the trademark business," said Mr. Stoller, who calls himself a "trademark protector." "There is no extortion or misrepresentation here. If [Mr. Pocekovic] spent over 20 years owning a mark, he would take great offence."

If he does not resolve the trademark dispute, his U.S. expansion plans could be affected, Mr. Pocekovic admits.

"I would not launch my product in the U.S. with [a trademark dispute] hanging over me," he said.

Trademark conflict is a huge issue for U.S. companies as well, especially those entering Asian markets, where copyright and trademark infringement are more common.

This week, a Shanghai coffee house was ordered to change its name after a two-year court battle with Starbucks Corp. A Chinese court told Shanghai Xingbake, which loosely translates to "Starbucks" in English, to change its name and fined the company US$62,000 because it is too similar to the U.S. company's name.

International trade law expert Steve Dickinson said the U.S. system of copyright registration is different than China's, which can sometimes make it difficult for businesses to claim their marks overseas. China did pass a "well-known marks" exception in 2001 so companies such as Starbucks could protect their global brands.

In Asia, it's still common for a company to take on the look and feel of an overseas competitor.

In Taiwan, for example, a local competitor of Kentucky Fried Chicken has a logo that includes an Asian-looking Colonel Sanders, but without the glasses and beard.

Meanwhile, the targets of trademark holders such as Mr. Stoller are fighting back more and more.

"Increasingly, clients are standing up for their rights," Mr. Hayes said. "They have a better understanding of what their rights are."

The 1997 Guide is designed to give those involved in the licensing industry as much relevant information as possible under one cover.

The Guide is divided alphabetically by Country. Licensors and Licensing Agents have given detailed information on their companies, listing properties, together with product available on the market for those properties, tv/video availability etc. Where a basic listing has been given the company has been referred to by a licensor/agent overseas and no questionnaire has been returned. Equally, if we have not received a questionnaire back from a company for two years, we have removed them from the Guide.

Licensees are listed alphabetically within their respective country. Where there are a large number of licensees listed, an index of companies under broad product bands has also been given at the start of the section. See right hand column for details.

Specialist Services: consultants, designers, attorneys, accountants have also been included where information is available, as well as trade publications and television companies.

Trade Show information is a feature that has proved very popular with our subscribers, and these have been listed under the relevant countries. You will also find a comprehensive "Calendar of Events on Pages 18 and 19 of the Guide.

Broadly, each country is divided into six sections:

- Licensors/Agents
- Licensees
- Specialist Services
- Trade Publications
- Television Companies
- Trade Shows

As a valued subscriber, if there is information that you need that has not been included in the Guide, please ring Cascade and we will be only too pleased to try and source it for you.

Whilst every effort is made to ensure the information supplied is correct, Cascade publishing is not responsible for any inaccuracies supplied by companies, or omissions. Companies which did not supply their information or who were not named by other sources are not included. Please advise the publisher of any changes to published data.

Welcome to the seventeenth annual edition of the Worldwide Licensing Directory.

As seems to happen every year, you will see that the number of listings in the directory has increased substantially. This mirrors the continuing growth in the licensing industry - particularly in countries outside the United States.

In particular, the number of licensees and manufacturers involved around the world has increased with new companies in countries never before listed.

This seventeenth edition of the Worldwide Licensing Directory is the most user-friendly publication in the marketplace. At-a-glance side tabs give easy access to the specific sections and country headers at the top of the page enable readers to find the information needed quickly and efficiently.

The directory opens with what many would consider to be the most important aspect of any licensing industry reference book - the information about properties available for licensing.

More than 12,000 properties are listed with their licensors and where relevant, individual territory agents.

Following the property index is a section containing comprehensive information about licensors and agents in 65 countries. As usual, full company information is provided together with lists of properties and overseas offices and representatives.

The third section of the directory covers licensees. Again, this section has grown over the year and the 1997/8 edition contains more than 5000 licensees for 60 countries. As always, licensee information includes full company details together with information about products manufactured and, for further ease of reference, major countries are prefaced by alphabetical listings of companies by specific product group e.g. toys, apparel etc.

We hope that you will find the 1997/8 Worldwide Licensing Directory helpful in your day to day business. Through all of A4's publications - which include Licensing Today Worldwide, Licensing Reporter, Licensing Business Review and the Beginner's Guide to Licensing - we aim to assist licensors, agents, licensees and others expand their licensing business.

As the longest serving publishing house dedicated to this industry, we like to hear from you. If you have any questions or suggestions about the directory, do please let us know. We'd be pleased to hear from you.
